

I Think God Should Apologize

Oops! Everyone make mistakes at times, and that's what makes us human. The same cannot be said of God because He is a Spirit and the Creator of the Universe. This in itself puts Him in a different category. As a result, He must be seen as Ruler and Lord over everything that He has created. Along with His authority, He is accountable to Himself, since there is none greater, and then to His creation. Equally true, man also share in the responsibility of living in harmony with each other and all creation. However, when history revealed that God has killed an estimation of 20 million people in or about 2500 BC by flood and have prophesied an undetermined amount of future killings it gives rise for great concern and given our human nature we want to know, why. Hence, written in an apologetic style, I Think God Should Apologize looks at God's killings through history and summarized that God by virtue of His righteous and just character will intervene once more in the life of mankind by the same necessity of judgment; failure to do so, means that He would be seen as inconsistent and as such, should apologize to the world in time past as well as this present generation. IRVING LAWSON serves as pastor for the Light of Life Church of God of Prophecy in Good Hope, St David in the Commonwealth of Dominica. He is the founder of Good Samaritan Ministries Inc., which seeks to assist those who are destitute, through education, mentoring, and social services.
