That it was not reasonable, that he should be his own Judge, because Self-love and Pride inclines a Man to determine, that he is possessed of these Faculties, and that they are not the Effects of comparing or Weighing Ideas. Though I had tquchel this Affair in many Places, chiefly jn the Introduction to Mosess---finePrincip. from p. 47, to. 62. and there wifhd that some Would carry through, wch none has done, so we seized upon a Free-thinker, ripped him open, dissected the Seat of his, Mind and examined it; we found Ballances and Scales to Ideas, and a Book of Memorials, all of his own forming, and mostly on the left-hand Pages, (as this was. by force, tis scarce fair to publish an Account of them) but could not see the Soul; we shut the Inlets of the Senses, Eyes, Ears, &c. and closed the Book; and then he could neither dream steeping, nor imagine waking, had nothing to act, upon, but was as if he had. been that Moment formed. Upon opening his Eyes and jfntl. his Book; we observed that the Idea they took in instantaneously, was conveyd throughr an Inlet instantane6ufly to theMind; and upon opening his Ears, theIdeas taken in by speaking or reading instantaneously in Succession, as the Words could be pronounced, were conveyedthrough another Inlet to the Mind; and that the Mind took in the (Ideas from the Senses, and compared or weighed them with each other; and with those in hisBook of Memory, or found a Blank, nor thing to weigh against them; so dispatched them, before the Faculties of his Mind could get time to revi...
